Reflection

Christian action then is done by you and me, ordinary people with weak and wobbly hearts who do not have the security of trained skills....

I think Christian action ... is done by those who are afraid of what people will say, who are a bit cowardly, who lack in confidence about standing up in public, do not have the security of plenty of practice and experience, can be capsized by failure, hurt by remarks, hurt by being ignored, find themselves reacting jealously when they do not want to, are overcome with despair, yet go on loving and trusting.

It is the weak and wobbly hearts that Christ chooses, as he chose Peter, James, John, Thomas – all the disciples.

They were not the high-fliers of Galilee or Judea; they were the ordinary folk, capable of love. (John Dalrymple)
